KEEP THE IRS OFF YOUR HEALTH CARE ACT

(Mr. DAINES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DAINES. Madam Speaker, like most Montanans, I was appalled to learn that the IRS had deliberately targeted groups for investigation based on their beliefs. Given these events, it would be senseless to empower the IRS to oversee major aspects of the American health care system. Yet that's what ObamaCare calls for.

That's why I've signed on to the Keep the IRS Off Your Health Care Act, which states that the IRS may not be involved in any aspect of President Obama's health care law. In fact, just last night, I held a tele-town hall meeting with thousands of my fellow Montanans, and more than 90 percent of those who participated agreed that the IRS should be stripped of its power to implement ObamaCare.

The American people have every right to demand that their government be accountable and that their government's actions be driven by a desire to serve the American people, not by political motivation. With the IRS' recent abuse of power, it's sadly clear that stopping the IRS from using its power to oversee Americans' health care is a necessary step.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA AT IRVINE VOLLEYBALL

(Mr. BERA of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BERA of California. Madam Speaker, I'd like to congratulate the 2013 NCAA men's volleyball championship team from my alma mater, the University of California, Irvine. The UC system is one of the best public college systems in the world, and UC Irvine, through its academics, its research and athletics, continues to make me proud.

The volleyball team recently won its fourth championship in 7 years. It's amazing. Congratulations especially goes to Connor Hughes, the tournament's Most Outstanding Player. He joined Chris Austin, Michael Brinkley, Collin Mehring, and Kevin Tillie on the all-tournament team. Hats off to Coach David Kniffin, who is just the second coach in the 44 years of men's volleyball history to coach a team to the championship in his first season.

You've made us all proud. Go Ant-eaters.

ENERGY II

(Mrs. BLACKBURN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BLACKBURN. My constituents are asking me this question: What does this administration have against expanding energy production?

More American energy means more American jobs. We all know that that is true. It also would mean lower energy costs, stronger national security, and a boost to our economy, a boost that we badly need with 12 million Americans out of work. Yet the President has seemed to stymie the energy sector at every single turn. We're going to give him the opportunity to change that record as we bring another bill forward that would approve moving forward with the northern route of the Keystone pipeline.

Now, we all know that burdensome overregulation by this administration has caused energy output domestically on our Federal lands to decrease significantly—about 30 percent. It hampers our ability to be productive.

DISASTER RELIEF

(Ms. CHU asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. CHU. This week, we saw heart-breaking images of devastation following a tornado in Moore, Oklahoma, that is estimated to have been more than a mile wide.

The scope of the disaster reminds us that we're all at the mercy of nature's whims, but it also reinforces a sense of community that we share as Americans. When the final cloud dissipated, Oklahomans were met by friends, neighbors, and Red Cross aid workers ready to help, the same as the victims of Sandy along the Jersey shore and the same as those who weathered the waters of Katrina in the Ninth Ward.

One thing every American can rely on in the face of disaster is that every other American wants to help. Whether we face tornadoes on the Great Plains or earthquakes in Los Angeles, we face them together. Let's make sure these victims get the Federal disaster aid they need on a timely basis. Whether we endure in a red State or a blue State, we are all equally deserving of each other's assistance.

KEYSTONE XL PIPELINE

(Ms. FOXX asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, parents know all too well the sinking feeling that settles in around the kitchen table when it's time to pay bills.

Utilities costs takes up more and more each month and the once-simple task of putting gas in the car has become an act of financial acrobatics.

Heading into a long, hot summer, House Republicans are committed to an all-of-the-above American energy strategy. If there's more American energy, prices will be more affordable, and there will be more American jobs. Period.

Who would stand in the way of that? Apparently, President Obama.

The President continues to play favorites in the energy sector and block domestic energy with onerous regulations. Red tape only makes it harder to capitalize on economic-growth opportunities and harder to achieve energy independence.

If the President were just to sign off on the Keystone XL pipeline today, he'd open up thousands of American jobs, but for 5 years he has refused.

House Republicans are serious about expanding energy production. It's time the President got serious, too.

JOHN LAIRD, THE HARVEY MILK CHAMPIONS OF CHANGE AWARD RECIPIENT

(Mr. FARR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge and congratulate John Laird, a constituent of mine in Santa Cruz, California.

Today, John is being hosted at the White House as one of the 10 persons to be presented the Harvey Milk Champions of Change award.

John Laird is a committed public servant, counting 23 years in elective office and 40 years in public life overall.

He also happens to be gay. John's years of leadership prove that people are people and they have myriad skills to share. Sexual orientation doesn't somehow change that desire to serve others.

Currently, John serves as the California Secretary of Natural Resources where he does an outstanding job of overseeing the State's vast outdoor resources.

Again, I say congratulations to Secretary John Laird for being true to himself and true to his public calling and all of us in the State of California being the ones who benefit from it.

KEYSTONE XL PIPELINE

(Mr. MARINO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MARINO. Madam Speaker, today I rise in support of the Keystone XL pipeline and urge passage of H.R. 3, the Northern Route Approval Act.

In the 1,700 days that TransCanada has been waiting for approval for Keystone XL, the State Department has issued over 15,000 pages of documents analyzing the project's environmental impact. This administration continues to delay and impede efforts to foster oil and natural gas production under an all-of-the-above energy solution.

Recent advances in technology have put America in the center of a booming
